Tuulia Iso-Tryykäri
Excercises of Disappearing
7.6. – 1.7.2017

I'm interested in people and the countless ways to tell the stories of man and humanity.

The most important thing for me is not the painting itself but the process and time I spent with the painting. Finally, there is a picture where all the hours spent with it are stored in its beauty or horribleness. I paint what I feel and I feel what I paint. It is important to look and to be seen.

The working process is physical for me. I set myself in the painting scene, it is important for me to experience the situation also in my body. I try to identify and know the painting: the skin and the materials. Eventually, my paintings are pictures of feelings, thoughts and subconsciousness, something that possibly has no words.
